Activity

Pupils see a presentation of a journey along the River Teifi, but you will notice that the slides are muddled and are not in the right order. Ask pupils to use their map skills to help you put it right.

NOTE: the slides in the PowerPoint are provided in the correct order so you will need to move the slides around before you start. The images showing the source and mouth are clearly marked so these will be straightforward to identify – unless you hide the captions.

Introduction

The River Teifi (Welsh: Afon Teifi) forms the boundary between the counties of Ceredigion and Carmarthenshire in south-west Wales for most of its length and flows into the sea below the town of Cardigan at Poppit Sands. The source of the Teifi is Llyn Teifi, one of several lakes known collectively as the Teifi Pools, in the Cambrian Mountains.

Main activity

Show the PowerPoint presentation of a journey along the River Teifi from source to mouth. As you look at the images, you will decide they are not in the right order.

Can the pupils use their maps skills to help you put it right?

Discuss what the river and the surrounding areas looks like in each of the images.

Open Digimap for Schools and give pupils a copy of the worksheet Teifi Places. Once they have completed this, show them the presentation again and let them help you reorder the slides. Some questions you might ask are:

- What was your favourite place along the river and why?
- What was the class favourite?

How did the landscape, and in particular the river, change along its journey to the sea?

Taking it further

- Save the images in the PowerPoint and involve pupils in adding some to these to a map to create an illustrated map of the river for classroom display.
- Look at the river in more detail using aerial photography.
- Compile a 'River Guide' for another river using the second worksheet.
- With Image Search in Digimap for Schools you can search for and display Geograph images on your map. You can save them locally if you wish to create a new PowerPoint presentation.
- Research some more information about your favourite place along the river.
